DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Levredge-Smithers house is a handsome two story frame structure, three bays wide and one deep with three additions to the east, two, two, and one story in height. It is constructed upon a stone foundation and the walls are covered with ersatz brick. The entrance with three pane transom is located on the north side of the west facade. Beside it are two long 1/1 sash windows reaching nearly to the floor. These windows are longer than originally and bear a plain trim, whereas, the window trim above is original, like the Smithers house. The sashes have also been reworked for 1/1 sash. The roof is covered with grey asphalt shingles and the box cornice contains the gutter. On the south side of the apex of the roof is a brick chimney partially stuccoed. The cornice and barge boards appear to be original.

A porch across the facade is very plain, however, its south post appears original with brackets and trim removed. Against the building is a scrolled bracket, the only one remaining from the former Italianate porch facia. It still possesses a wood floor.

There is a leanto on the north side of the wings, partially enclosed.

The building was originally covered with wood weatherboard, the sash were 6/6 as indicated above and there were paneled and louvered shutters on the first and second storys respectively. The porch had brackets around the facia as seen adjacent the house and there was probably a balustrade of pierced splats.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Levredge-Smithers House is important as an example of residential building of the 1840's or early 1850's. It's influence is chiefly the vernacular although, the scrolled cornice of the porch would indicate a touch of the Italianate style.

About 1848, Sarah Beaston had this house built and she and her heirs lived here for twenty years. Thomas Cleaver, Canal Superintendent, bought the house for $1,000.00 in 1866 and lived here until he moved into the larger house on the southeast corner of Bohemia Avenue and Third Street. John Smithers and Emiline, his wife, lived here from 1869 until 1878 when John M Reed bought the property.

Mr. Reed was a well known storekeeper in Chesapeake City, having his business in the neat white building at the southwest corner of Bohemia Avenue and Front Street, where he served townspeople and Canal people alike.

Before the 1920's this house was rented as a Methodist Parsonage, then the Peaper family came into ownership. Mr. William Peaper was an engineer on the Wilson Line Steamer.

The house has significance as the home of Canal men in the nineteenth century.
